Letter of Recommendation for Alper Sarper

We are a technology startup developing AI-based simulation and optimization platforms for the energy sector. In this environment, Alper has worked with us for over 2.5 years as a Senior Front-end Developer.

Alper was one of our very first hires and quickly became a foundational member of the team. From the beginning, he contributed not only to our front-end architecture, but also to how we communicate and collaborate as a startup. He has consistently taken ownership beyond his formal role.

As a front-end engineer, Alper is product-minded and detail-oriented. He does not treat features as tasks to complete, but as problems to solve properly. He is willing to iterate and refine until he is convinced that the result serves both the user's needs and the product's long-term direction. This mindset has been especially valuable for us while building a first-of-its-kind platform in a complex domain.

Throughout his time with us, Alper has shown a genuine hunger for learning and self-improvement. Even in our fast-paced startup environment, he keeps looking for better approaches, tools, and patterns, and when there isn't always someone more senior to ask, he dives into documentation, community resources, and internal discussions to keep things moving. He pairs this curiosity with a healthy sense of work-life balance and team well-being: he knows when the team needs to push to meet a deadline and when it's smarter to slow down to avoid burnout and mistakes. He gives and receives feedback openly and respectfully, and his comments are always driven by what's best for the product and the company.

In the more chaotic periods that naturally come with startup life, Alper has been a steady and resilient presence. He notices when motivation is dropping or when a process isn't working and makes a real effort to help—whether by jumping in himself, suggesting clearer ways of working, or just being a calm and supportive teammate. Even though his formal management experience is limited for now, he already shows many qualities of a future team lead or engineering manager: ownership, empathy, clear communication, and a strong sense of responsibility for both the codebase and the people around him.

All in all, I recommend Alper without reservation for his future roles and believe he has clear potential to grow into leadership positions.

Please do not hesitate to contact me if you require any further information.

Sincerely,

Emin Batur Dizdar
Co-founder & CTO, Ratio Energy
dizdar@ratioenergy.co | +90 538 363 42 20